I am the Manager of Clinical Supervision and Training for the Human-Nature Counselling Society - a charitable organization which provides accessible mental health services to people across the lifespan primarily through the lens of Nature-Based Therapy. I have an MSW (2001) and am a registered RCC. I have been providing counselling to children, youth, adults and families for over 20 years.

Modalities of focus include Emotion-Focused Therapy, Narrative Therapy, and Nature-Based Therapy with a breadth of understanding and experience using other modalities. I approach my work with families from an attachment and systems lens, supporting clients to explore, heal, and enhance their relationships with themselves, others, and the world they live in. I support clients in connecting with nature to support regulation, re-structuring bonds, and integration/meaning making. I have been providing clinical supervision and consultation since 2005. I am passionate about supporting the professional development of counsellors as they explore their approach and connection to the work they engage in with clients.

My current focus is on supporting counsellors, through supervision, consultation, and training in the area of Nature-Based Therapy, and thus prioritize supervision clients seeking supervision relevant to this area of practice.
