I am a therapist in private practise and have been working with complex trauma for over 25yrs. I have also worked with the Ministry for Children and Families, local school districts and outpatient addictions centres. I am a Master Trainer in Observed and Experiential Integration and a Consultant for Lifespan Integration. I am also board certified and a mentor for the BCIA in Neurofeedback. I teach at two Vancouver Universities and supervise the development of clinical skills in some of the courses I teach there namely group therapy, addictions, trauma and basic and advanced clinical skills. I am also a Daring Way Certified Facilitator and trained with Brene Brown in becoming certified.

I work in a collaborative supervisory style and enjoy immensely seeing therapists grow not only in their skills but also as the person of the therapist
