I work in a virtual private practice in Vancouver, BC. My work as a counsellor and as a supervisor/consultant is anti-oppressive, trauma-informed, and relational at its foundation. I came to this work through community mental health and anti-violence, particularly working with people who have experienced sexualized violence. I create a supportive space for you to talk about the messy and uncomfortable parts of therapy, so we can have generative conversations about what might be happening with your clients. While my own experiences, training, and theoretical orientation inform the ideas I bring to the table, we will engage meaningfully in discussing your values, ethics, and unique perspectives informed by lived experience. The aim of our work is to nurture your growth, increase your efficacy, support your ongoing wellness, and ensure ethical practice with your clients. Self-awareness, self-knowledge, and self-attunement are at the heart of our work together.
