I have been in the field of counselling for 34 years, have worked in non-profits for substance use, and have managed and supervised substance use programs, intimate partner violence programs, child and youth suicide programs, family counselling programs, seniors counselling programs, young parent programs, and children's groups for anxiety. I have supervised Master's level counsellors for the past 27 years and Master's Counselling Interns for the past 10 years and specialize in the areas of substance use, intimate partner violence, and general counselling. I joined BCACC in 2011 and currently chair the BCACC Ethics Committee. I have also taught the following courses at Vancouver Community College for the past 31 years; Assessment and Referral Practices for Substance Use, Individual Counselling, Personal and Professional Development (Ethics), and Practicum. My approach to supervision is collaborative and empowering. I work from a strength-based, trauma and resiliency-informed practice lens with the client as the expert in their own life. I do not work from one particular model, rather I seek to find what will work best for the client, not try and fit the client into a model.
