Lindsay has worked as a clinical counsellor for over a decade specializing in trauma-related concerns, operating from an attachment framework and implementing trauma-processing models like Observed Experiential Integration (OEI). Lindsay has worked supervising student interns for nearly 10 years within her private practice, and has offered clinical consultation services in both individual and group formats for a number of years. Lindsay works collaboratively with clinicians to understand their needs and goals for supervision/consultation, and provides support to promote positive outcomes for clinicians and clients alike. Lindsay focuses on bringing authenticity and genuineness to her clinical work as well as in her supervisory roles, and encourages clinicians to find more ways to bring themselves fully and meaningfully into their work. Lindsay works quite a bit with burnout related concerns and works to support clinicians in managing their own wellness within the high demand nature of the work we do.
