I have been a counsellor for the past 30 years (with a 7-year break to stay home with my 3 children). My interest in Clinical Supervision started when I experienced excellent supervision in my own practice. I have supervised both undergrad and graduate students, I do individual and group supervision with several agencies; both in person and online and have done certification and extensive reading in the field of clinical supervision. One of my passions as a counsellor and in my life is on-going learning and I believe that sharing amongst colleagues is vastly enriching.

The importance of building a healthy therapeutic relationship, both in my counselling practice and with the people I supervise, cannot be understated, and is facilitated by working toward a respectful, trusting and safe professional relationship. My feminist and multicultural lens help relationships maintain equity and mutual respect as well as open, honest and direct communication.
