For the last 20 years, I have worked with families, children, and intimate relationships. My clinical lens is informed by a few primary ingredients - attachment theory, neurobiology, and a systemic approach. As a certified Trauma Informed Stabilization Treatment Therapist, I am inclined to embrace “parts work” but also rely on training in Sensorimotor Psychotherapy, Expressive Play Therapy, Emotion-focused Therapy and Gottman Therapy.

I supervised counselling psychology graduate students for many years and continue to provide individual and group supervision to counsellors in private practice, schools and those working in STV, PEACE and Victim Services programs in community agencies.

I believe the foundation of quality supervision is our relationship and I prioritize collaborative practice and establishing safety. I am supportive and curious, AND I will offer ideas and suggestions as invited. I am open to using a range of muscles as your clinical supervisor, from unpacking your reactions, conceptualizing the work, or role-playing as counsellor.
