In more than 3 decades of clinical practice, I have worked in government mental health teams, community-based anti-violence agencies, multicultural services agencies, university counselling services and private practice. I have also supervised students and professional counsellors working in various non-profit counselling agencies; including immigrant, refugee, and indigenous community agencies, and counsellors in private practice.

As a clinical counsellor and supervisor, I practice from a systemic, anti-oppressive, inclusive perspective, with an awareness of complex intersectionalities. Clinical supervision with me respects your worldview, challenges your perspectives and conceptualisations, and celebrates your strengths. Ethical and intentional practices are important focuses, as well as your growth and development as a counsellor.
